Bilingue /Bilingual
Dear Publish What You Pay members, partners and friends,

I am delighted to welcome you to the fifth Publish What You Pay Global Assembly, and the first to take place on the African continent.

Over the coming three days, we have a unique opportunity to celebrate our collective achievements and to strengthen our global movement for transparency, citizen participation and accountability in the extractive sector; to share with and learn from each other; to forge deeper relationships; and to develop a collective agenda for action and impact for the next five years.

One of the highlights of this Global Assembly will be the adoption of the PWYP Global Strategy 2020-2025, which is the result of an 18-month long, transnational conversation in which many of you have been deeply involved. The Global Strategy sets out four goals for achieving our vision of a world in which all citizens benefit from their natural resources, today and tomorrow. To make this vision a reality, by 2025, our global movement will be more informed, influential, heard and connected.

In this era of populism and extremism, human rights violations and rising inequalities, which all contribute to eroding open societies, our work for transparency, justice, accountability and equity in natural resource governance is needed more than ever. As the only global movement of dedicated women and men working to make the oil, gas and mineral sector open, accountable, sustainable, equitable and responsive to all people, I have no doubt that together, we have the collective strength to make a difference.

I take this opportunity to thank the PWYP coalition in Senegal for their gracious invitation and excellent hospitality; our donors and supporters, without whom this event would not have been possible; my colleagues at the PWYP Secretariat who have worked hard over the past few months to build an engaging programme; and all of you for your enduring commitment and courage.

Enjoy the Global Assembly!

In solidarity,

Elisa Peter
Executive Director,
Publish What You Pay
SE Mahammed Dionne (Keynote speaker)
Prime Minister of Senegal since 2014

HE Mahammed Dionne has been Prime Minister of Senegal since 2014. Prior to his appointment as Prime Minister, he served from March to July 2014 as Minister for the Implementation of the Emerging Senegal Plan (PSE), a economic and social development plan to make the country an emerging economy by 2035. Prior to his political career, Dionne worked at the Central Bank of West African States and at the United Nations Industrial Development Organisation.

Obiageli Ezekwesilieze (Keynote speaker)
Nigeria's Federal Minister of Solid Minerals and Education

Obiageli Ezekwesilieze served as Nigeria’s Federal Minister of Solid Minerals and then as Federal Minister of Education in 2005-2006. She was the Chairperson of the Nigeria Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (NEITI) and led the national implementation of the global standard in Nigeria. She is a former Vice-President of the World Bank’s Africa division and one of the co-founders of Transparency International. She has been nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize. She leads the Bring Back Our Girls group calling for the safe return of Nigerian schoolgirls kidnapped in 2014. She is a candidate in Nigeria’s 2019 presidential election.

Ory Okolloh (Moderator)
Managing Director of Investments, Luminate, Kenya

Ory Okolloh is the Managing Director of Investments at Luminate, an organisation that invests in non-profit and for-profit organisations with the goal of empowering people and institutions to work together to build just and fair societies. Okolloh was previously Policy Manager for sub-Saharan Africa at Google Inc. and a founding member of Ushahidi, a crowdsourcing platform for citizen-reported information to increase accountability. Okolloh is also the co-founder of Mzalendo, as well as an Aspen Global Leadership Network (AGLN) Fellow and an advisory board member to Twiga Foods and Endeavor Kenya.

Mark Robinson
Executive Director, Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative

Mark Robinson is the Executive Director of the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI). Prior to joining the EITI in November 2018, Robinson was Global Director, Governance at the World Resources Institute in the United States. He has held a number of leadership and management roles in the governance field, including at the UK Department for International Development, the Institute for Development Studies, the Ford Foundation, and the Overseas Development Institute.

Nikhil Dey
Social Activist, Right to Information Campaign, India

Nikhil Dey is an Indian social activist and a founding member of India’s National Campaign for People’s Right to Information, which successful advocated for the establishment of a Right to Information Act to promote transparency and good governance. Dey has been a fervent advocate for justice and equality, including grassroots struggles for land rights, for decades. He has been also involved in numerous human rights campaigns including on the Right to Work and the Right to Food.
Caroline Othim
Global Policy and Campaigns Coordinator, Africa, Global Alliance for Tax Justice (GATJ)

Caroline Othim is the Global Policy and Campaigns Coordinator - Africa of the Global Alliance for Tax Justice (GATJ). She is a public policy expert, tax justice campaigner and a gender specialist. Othim has led campaigns such as “Multinationals Pay Your Fair Share” and “Tax Justice for Women’s Rights”. She has previously worked and consulted for UNICEF, the East Africa Tax and Governance Network, Women in Law and Development, National Taxpayers Association and the Kenya Women Parliamentarians Association, among other entities, working to enhance women’s political participation and gender responsive budgeting.

Isabel Munilla
Policy Lead, Extractive Industries Transparency, Oxfam America

Isabel Munilla leads research and analysis on oil, gas and mining transparency with a focus on securities, contract disclosure norms and the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative. Previously, Munilla was the Director of PWYP U.S., where she led the 2010 drive to pass Section 1504/Cardin-Lugar provision of the Dodd-Frank Act. Prior to joining PWYP, she worked at the World Resources Institute on the social and environmental impacts and benefits of natural resource extraction.

John Gaventa (Moderator)
Director of Research, Institute of Development Studies, United Kingdom

Professor John Gaventa is a development researcher, educator and civil society practitioner with over 30 years of experience in research, teaching and facilitation. He is the Director of Research at the Institute of Development Studies, where he has written and worked extensively on issues of citizenship and citizen engagement, power and participation, governance and accountability, and leadership for social change in a number of countries around the world. In 2011 he received the Tisch Civic Engagement Research Prize for his distinguished scholarship on civic learning, citizen participation and engaged research.

Ibrahima Sory Diallo
President PWYP Senegal, Founder of La Lumière

Ibrahima Sory Diallo is the President of PWYP Senegal. Ibrahima’s organisation, La Lumière, is beginning to achieve landmark victories in Senegal, in areas such as strengthening safeguards in mining laws, curbing environmental abuses and mobilising civil society to press for regulation of the country’s growing mining industry. Diallo works for meaningful extractive sector reform through a step-by-step approach incorporating government, business and civil society. In particular, he works to remediate and protect groundwater and safeguard the health of local populations in mining areas.
Alioune Tine is currently the United Nations Independent Expert on the situation of human rights in Mali. Between 2014 and 2018, he was Amnesty International’s Regional Director for West and Central Africa. Alioune was also a founding member and President of the African Meeting for the Defense of Human Rights and Coordinator of the Forum of African NGOs at the World Conference against Racism in 2000. He has published many articles and studies on human rights and took part in PWYP’s mission to Niger in August 2018 to advocate for the release of imprisoned PWYP activists.

Miranda Patrucic, a winner of the 2016 ICFJ Knight International Journalism Award, is an investigative reporter who has uncovered corruption and financial crimes at the highest levels across Europe and Central Asia. A lead reporter and regional editor for the Organized Crime and Corruption Reporting Project and one of the investigative journalists of the “Panama Papers”, Patrucic played a pivotal role in probes that led to government investigations in multiple countries, including in Azerbaijan where she helped expose a web of secret companies designed to hide the staggering wealth of the President.

Alfredo Okenve is a well-known human rights defender and activist who for many years has been denouncing, nationally and internationally, regular patterns of human rights violations and corruption. He is Vice-president of the Center for Development Studies and Initiatives (CEID), a human rights and development organization in Equatorial Guinea.

Suneeta Kaimal is Chair of the PWYP Global Council and Chief Operating Officer of the Natural Resource Governance Institute (NRGI). Suneeta Kaimal is Chair of the PWYP Global Council. She is the Chief Operating Officer of the Natural Resource Governance Institute (NRGI), ensuring citizens realize the benefits of their countries’ endowments of oil, gas and minerals. Kaimal oversees NRGI’s strategic planning and implementation, driving a responsive, opportunistic, yet strategic approach to addressing new challenges and opportunities in resource governance. Kaimal is Civil Society co-Chair of the Open Government Partnership as well as serving on the Advisory Council of the International Center for Not-For-Profit Law.

GLOBAL ASSEMBLY

DAKAR, 23-31 JANUARY

PWYP 2019

WEDNESDAY 30 JANUARY 2019

DAY 2
MORNING SESSIONS

Power Dynamics and Participation (9:00 – 10:30)
Civic participation and citizen action are essential for open and accountable governments. Yet closing civic space and decreasing opportunities for civic engagement have become a common problem for many PWYP members across the globe. In this interactive workshop, participants will look at how to analyse and understand the different faces and spaces of power, using the powercube approach, and how these affect how civil society can engage in natural resource governance.

Facilitators
- John Gaventa
  - Institute of Development Studies

Communications and advocacy - how to run an impactful social media campaign (09:00 to 10:30)
During this hands-on skills session, members will learn from successful uses of social media, and other communications platforms, to deliver strong advocacy messages. Starting with the work of Spaces for Change real examples from members carrying out strategic communications will be shared and lessons will be drawn from each of those, including tips for success and how to build on common challenges. Through this session, participants will gain an increased understanding of the impact and significance of communication tools for advocacy, and how to use them effectively, even with limited resources.

Facilitator
- Victoria Ohaeri
  - Spaces for Change, Nigeria

Making sense of data for your work (09:00-12:30)
In the past few years, more and more information about extractive operations has become available, covering a wide range of disclosures from revenues to environmental impacts and beneficial ownership. This session will help review how this newly available data can be relevant for the different parts of the Chain For Change. A review of specific problems that data can help solve will also be on the agenda, helping participants understand how extractives data is relevant to their own issues.

Facilitators
- Cédric Lombion, School of Data
- Katelyn Rogers, School of Data
- James Royston, PWYP Secretariat

Transparency talks (09:00-12:30)
This session will give six speakers from across the PWP movement the opportunity to present short and powerful talks, followed by a short, facilitated discussion (15 minutes) about the question, problem or idea they have presented.

- Accounting for the resource curse: Minerals as a shared inheritance (9:00-9:30)
  Does the way that we think of natural resources encourage mismanagement and even corruption? Rahul will propose that a significant step can be taken towards addressing the resource curse by seeing mineral wealth as a shared inheritance, to be held in trusts for future generations. Moving away from the conventional view of royalties as revenue, the Goa Foundation has defined some clear campaigning principles which will be shared during this talk.

  Speaker
  - Rahul Basu
    - Goa Foundation, Inde

- EITI and gender: lessons and opportunities from our pilot project in West Africa (9:30-10:00)
  As the second year of PWYP’s pilot project on how to make EITI implementation more gender responsive begins, Marieme will reflect on key lessons learned so far, as well as on opportunities for the PWYP movement to lead the way in ensuring that women and girls aren’t left behind by the extractives transparency and accountability agenda.

  Speaker
  - Marieme Mbacke
    - PWYP Senegal
Tax & Transparency (10:00 - 10:30)
Jason will link emerging issues around taxation to the global discussion around illicit financial flows and the call for multinationals to pay their fair share of tax, as well as to the call on government to be transparent and accountable to citizens; and at the same time, for citizens to engage with government to demand more transparency and accountability.

Beneficial Ownership: challenges and opportunities (11:00 - 11.30)
In the next few years, Mongolia will be receiving its highest revenues from extractive sector in its history. This has led to beneficial ownership becoming an important, but also sensitive, topic in Mongolia. PWYP Mongolia, one of the global coalition's strongest advocates for public disclosure of beneficial ownership, is now facing a new set of challenges in their work, which Erdenechimeg will discuss in this talk.

PWYP and the Africa Mining Vision (11:30 -12:00)
Mutuso will reflect on the relevance of the Africa Mining Vision to the governance of the mining sector in Africa and the need for governments to embrace it by domesticating it within country policies and practices. He will also talk about the role of PWYP members in calling for the implementation of the Africa Mining Vision at national and regional level.

The environmental and social costs of oil and gas production (12:00-12:30)
Diana will be talking about the environmental and social impacts of extractive activities, particularly oil and gas. She will refer to Lebanese Oil and Gas Initiative’s endeavor, supported by PWYP, which resulted in the government approving the update of the Lebanese Strategic Environmental Assessment and the inclusion of the public in this process.

Closing Civic Space - challenging existing narratives (11:00-12:30)
PWYP members will share their stories on closing civic space. Participants will use the earlier presented powercube framework to understand the power dynamics at play within the contexts in which they are working, and how to respond to the restrictions on civic space that they face.

Africa Leaks and investigative journalism - tools for accountability (11:00-12:30)
In the past few years there has been an increasing amount of ground-breaking investigations by journalists, who have put themselves at risk to uncover the truth behind wrongdoings by corporations and governments. Yet civil society has so far not made the most of these many revelations, despite both groups striving for more transparency and accountability. This session will look at what PWYP members can learn from investigative journalists, how civil society can support journalists’ work, and how civil society and journalists can face the increase threats and challenges together, while retaining their independence.

<tr>
<td>PWYP members have been involved in the EITI from its inception and through its implementation in many countries. It is one of the main mechanisms for driving greater transparency in the extractive sector and it provides an opportunity for meaningful civil society participation in promoting extractive reforms. This interactive session will reflect on civil society's achievements and lessons in implementing the EITI, particularly in securing civic space, encouraging contract transparency and disclosing beneficial ownership. The session will look at how these successes and challenges can inform civil society's future approach around key emerging policy issues such as the mainstreaming of EITI reporting, environmental and social impact disclosures and gender in extractives.</td>

<td>In 2018 PWYP began a pilot project, initiated in response to calls from PWYP members, to explore how the EITI could be implemented in a way that ensures women's active participation, including in decision making processes about the exploitation of their natural resources. This session will provide an opportunity for members to hear the results of the pilot so far (in Senegal, Guinea and Burkina Faso) as well as those from Oxfam's project to integrate gender considerations in the revision of the ECOWAS mining code; and to explore tools and methods for integrating a gender lens into extractives transparency programming in a way which fosters women's participation and leadership in natural resource governance.</td>

<td>If we want to meet even weak emissions targets, up to 3/4 of existing oil discoveries need to be left in the ground. Senegal is one of the oil industry's new “hot spots” and hopes for high revenues from its future explorations. This workshop will present modelling analysis on all current oil and gas contracts in Senegal and show how uncertain the expected revenues are if energy transition becomes real. The Senegalese example will be put in the context of international debates on climate change and the future of fossil fuels and enriched by examples from Latin America.</td>
